Chair's review 2024

Ian Croft
Chair of UKCPI Council

Being in business is tough and it is likely to get tougher as I am writing this the day after our new Government's first budget!

So seeking value for money in everything we do is key, including Trade Association membership.

As such I thought it useful to remind myself of why my company is a member of UKCPI and how and where it delivers value for its members.

I see a key value of UKCPI as providing guidance and assistance to members on the relevant regulations and also to ensure our voice is heard when they are reviewed or new regulations proposed.

I invite you to read in the following sections how UKCPI, through its excellent relationships with government officials, is providing input to UK REACH and reforms to GB CLP and GB BPR. In addition, during 2024 UKCPI sought a speedy and valuable 'workaround' on divergent issues on the Detergent Regulation with its first assured advice from its Primary Authority Partnership.

In terms of value for money, it would be difficult for any company to be able to resource their own efforts with regulators even assuming that the regulator would listen to individual company proposals.

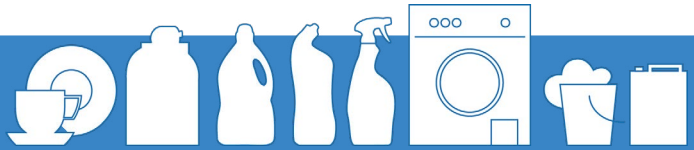

Whilst reviewing the regulatory landscape it would be remiss of me not to mention the benefit and value members get from our Technical Manager Steve Stewart's depth and breadth of regulatory experience – not just covering GB regulations but also keeping abreast of a plethora of change to come at the EU level.

A second key value that UKCPI delivers for its members is to provide a credible industry view on topics raised by media or an NGO before they become major issues. One standout topic this year was the BBC 'investigation' into air fresheners which could have quite easily spun into a much bigger and negative outcome if it were not for the quick coordination and confident response from our Communications Officer Charlotte Salter. This resulted in a very positive and useful debunking of some of the negative myths around indoor air quality. Again this approach from UKCPI to engage with the media on behalf of companies is of enormous value to members.

Another example of UKCPI taking the initiative and providing value where companies would find it difficult is in relation to reducing cleaning product accidents in the home (and likely public concerns over product safety). We have reported regularly on our successful campaign to reduce infant accidents in the home. Again please read the section on this campaign now launched in over 50 regions of the UK and reaching over 700,000 homes. Whilst this is valuable in itself in terms of infant accident reduction (50% in some regions), it has become an exemplary concept on home safety which we have used to address another concern of the safe use and storage of our products in the homes of an aging and vulnerable population. Whilst this is still in its formative stages, I would like to thank our Director General Philip Malpass and Admin Manager Kathryn Dodgson for managing our response to this issue and driving what should be a very important activity in the future.

I am a firm believer that you get more value out of an organisation the more you put in. I would like to thank my colleagues who give their time and expertise to our committees and working groups and would encourage others to do so. You will not only benefit yourself and your company, but also contribute to the excellent work that UKCPI carries out on behalf of us all.

Ian Croft
Head of Regulatory Affairs, McBride

An introduction to UKCPI

What is the UKCPI?

The UK Cleaning Products Industry Association (UKCPI) is the leading trade association representing UK producers of cleaning and hygiene products – from laundry, dishwashing, household disinfectants, home care and air care, to the professional cleaning and hygiene products used in industrial and institutional applications. Membership is open to companies that manufacture or market cleaning products in the United Kingdom.

We estimate that our membership includes over 98% of UK consumer product manufacturers and over 60% of UK professional cleaning and hygiene product manufacturers.

What we do

Industry representation

- UKCPI represents its members' interests directly to UK Government departments, stakeholders and academic bodies to ensure practical and sensible formulation and then application of UK policy and regulation.
- Through membership of AISE (Association for Soaps, Detergents and Maintenance Products), UKCPI ensures that UK members are kept aware of regulatory changes at a European level, which remain relevant to Northern Ireland.

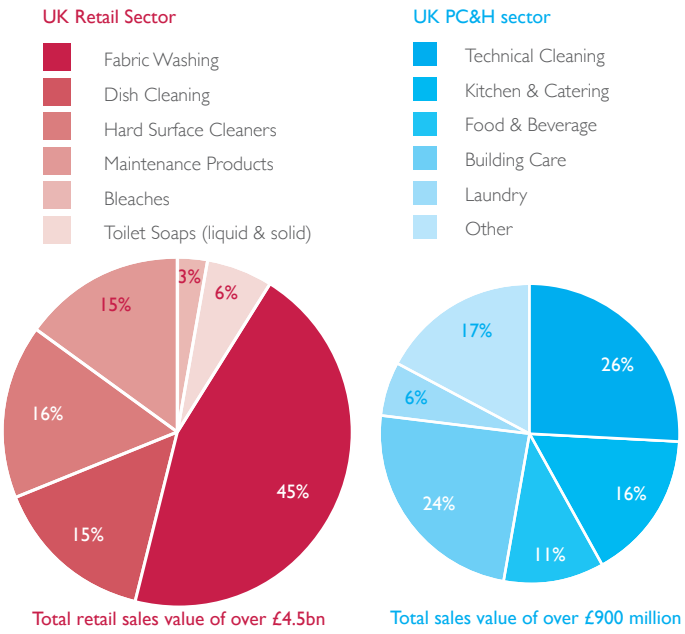

Advice and guidance

- Provide valuable advice and guidance to members regarding current and forthcoming legislation and regulation.
- Organise members' forums, seminars and workshops to keep members up-to-date on technical and regulatory developments and issues.
- Give individual help to members on a daily basis, especially regarding technical and regulatory affairs.
- Maintain a comprehensive members' extranet covering legal and regulatory requirements.

Authoritative industry voice

- Provide the industry voice for its members to the media and outside organisations, both directly and through its website: www.ukcpi.org
- Give advice and answer queries from the general public, continually working to improve knowledge and understanding of the industry's products.
- Proactively engage with journalists to provide information and comment to foster balanced reporting on our sector. Additionally, challenge and correct misleading coverage.

The UK market

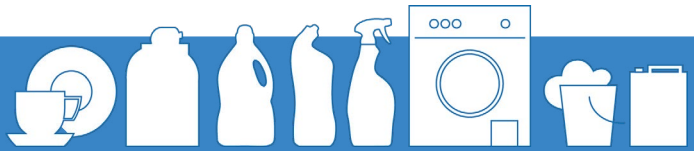

"The UK cleaning and hygiene product manufacturing sector generates over £4.5 billion in sales annually and directly employs over 10,000 people – many in SMEs."

Everyday millions of people use cleaning products to give them the clean and safe lifestyle that they expect and take for granted in the 21st century.

The UK soaps, detergents and cleaning products sector has been, and should remain, a success story for UK plc – it delivers the health and hygiene standards we take for granted today.

Table of Contents

Member benefits

UKCPI members benefit from a range of services including free meetings and seminars, individual support and guidance, newsletters and a private extranet updated every month.

Technical and regulatory support and guidance

All members have direct access to the Technical Manager on a one-to-one basis and this service continues to be well used, given the regulatory burden the industry faces.

Enquiries on key issues such as labelling and biocide regulations are a frequent topic and this reflects the core activities the association undertakes in regard to the legislation that members have to keep up with.

Feedback from companies showed that the work of the association on these issues was a major factor for membership satisfaction.

Advocacy

Of great value to members is UKCPI's access to and credibility with officials and policy makers. This often means that UKCPI is asked to meet and contribute to Government thinking on regulations prior to initiatives being fully developed, which has been essential during 2024.

> "UKCPI works regularly with a number of Government departments and stakeholder groups to promote members' interests."

European link

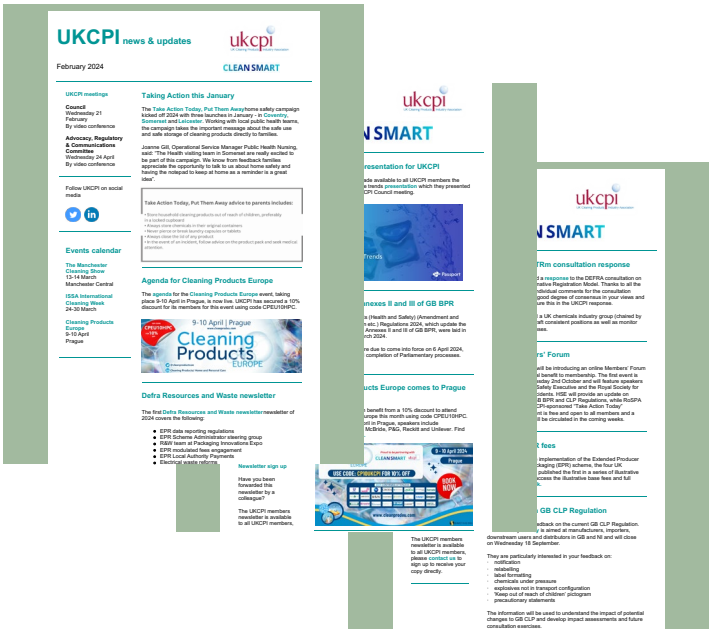

UKCPI staff are directly linked to the European association AISE at key points from board level through to many of the working groups. This strong relationship with AISE continues to be important as members operate in both UK and EU markets.

Members' Forums

In 2024 UKCPI introduced online forums on issues important to members, covering the key topics of the moment. These webinars were an opportunity for members to hear directly from policy makers and obtain clarity on significant topics.

Newsletter and monthly email update

A monthly email newsletter provides members with updates on UKCPI activity, legislative and regulatory news, details of forthcoming meetings and events, as well as a summary of relevant news stories that have appeared in the media each month.

Members' extranet

The extranet allows UKCPI members to search for the latest updates on issues covered by UKCPI, AISE and the various committees. Tracking of UKCPI meetings, issues and position papers is also available for members here. A monthly email summarises the latest documents uploaded to the extranet and allows members to click through and log in.

Advocacy, Regulatory and Communications (ARC) Committee

The ARC committee prioritises and supports the advocacy, regulatory and communications work of UKCPI. The committee allows for technical, advocacy and communications experts to sit together and gives UKCPI a strong basis on which to assess and then address a range of topics – some of which are demonstrated below.

Advocacy

UKCPI's value to its members is its access to and credibility with officials and policy makers. This often means that UKCPI is asked to meet and contribute to Government thinking prior to initiatives being fully developed.

The General Election and change of Government partway through the year has required greater contact with officials to understand better how the new Government's priorities will impact our regulatory landscape.

EU exit

Throughout 2024, and particularly with a new Government approach to future EU relations, we continued to assess and understand a number of post-Brexit political actions and their impact on members - not least the Retained EU Law (Revocation and Reform) Act, the Northern Ireland Protocol and the Windsor Framework to ease movement of goods between GB and Northern Ireland. UKCPI's membership of the Defra-led Chemicals Stakeholder Forum (CSF), also the Defra Chemicals Policy and Communications Forum (CPCF) and the Alliance of Chemical Associations (ACA) meant we could meet regularly with relevant officials and align downstream users and industry positions on shared concerns.

Primary Authority Partnership

UKCPI requested and secured a Primary Authority Partnership with Bucks and Surrey Trading Standards with a view to seeking 'assured advice' on compliance issues, where it was deemed appropriate. The first such 'assured advice' related to divergent requirements between EU and GB Detergent regulations for fragrance labelling, whereby the EU regulations require more allergenic substances to be labelled compared to GB requirements. The assured advice provides reassurance that a product for the GB market can carry an extended list of allergenic fragrances as required by the EU as it provides greater consumer information and protection.

Consultations and calls for evidence

UKCPI reflected members' comments in its response to consultations throughout the year.

i) UK REACH

The long-awaited consultation on an alternative transitional registration model for UK REACH was launched over the summer. This consultation followed numerous meetings, webinars and much dialogue with the chemicals supply chain including UKCPI. The proposed 'ATRm' was largely welcomed by industry after some three years of advocacy as it proposed to reduce the cost of registration as well as move away from hazard data to use and exposure / risk data. In addition to seeking comments on the ATRm, the consultation also looks at how to improve the REACH restriction process and animal testing requirements. At the time of going to press, over 200 replies had been received by DEFRA with a formal Government response expected early 2025.

ii) Proposed ban on the sale and marketing of wipes containing plastic

UKCPI responded to this consultation in October 2023. The Government's response in April 2024 reflected our position that the ban should not extend to wipes used for industrial and medical purposes and that monomers and polymers of viscose, lyocell and cotton are acknowledged as not plastic using the UK REACH definition of plastic and hence are also excluded from the ban. The ban will be enforceable from 2026 after allowing for an 18 months transition period.

iii) OPSS Consultation on Smarter Regulations for Product Safety Review

In August the OPSS launched a consultation on a review of their product safety regime. Whilst cleaning products are not in the OPSS regulatory regime. they could come under the General Product Safety Regulations if an unsafe product was placed on the market and was not covered by other specific legislation. As such we responded to the consultation and the questions it contained as they related to the key points of the GPSR.

iv) Intentionally added synthetic polymer microparticles

UKCPI responded to this DEFRA call for evidence, usually a precursor to a consultation on legislation, and could follow the planned EU REACH restriction on synthetic polymer microparticles coming into force from 2025. The initial discussion was on the scope for our sector which could include waxes and polishes as well as encapsulated fragrances.

v) Citizen Space

This is now the main consultation platform used by Government departments when seeking responses to proposed legislative changes. Throughout the year, either in consultations or in meetings with officials, UKCPI has repeated its concern that the platform takes no account of the representative 'voice' of a trade association. That is to say that it is counted as one voice despite representing many companies. UKCPI will continue to raise this concern at every opportunity.

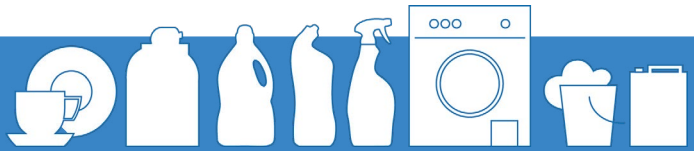

Regulatory

The UK operates under its own chemicals regulatory regime, following the UK's exit from the EU. Initially this is based on "lifting and shifting" the retained EU legislation and making changes that make it workable in the UK. UKCPI has been keenly monitoring developments and, where appropriate, has submitted comments on behalf of industry to government officials. Northern Ireland will continue to follow EU regulations under the Northern Ireland Protocol and the Windsor Framework adopted in March 2023.

Regulation on Classification, Labelling and Packaging of substances and mixtures (CLP)

As part of the Chemicals Strategy for Sustainability, the European Commission set in motion the revision of CLP and the Council adopted the text in October. The revised regulation clarifies the rules on labelling chemical substances and adapts them to different forms of trade (such as online trade or bulk sales at refill stations). The regulation also promotes the circularity of chemical products, makes labelling (including digital labelling) clearer and easier to read, and ensures a higher level of protection against chemical hazards. The revision facilitates the reporting on new hazards related to chemicals that are placed on the market and gives the Commission and the other stakeholders new powers to classify harmful substances and accelerate their identification.

In the UK, a mandatory classification table was established by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) and continues to be updated. For this, HSE published a Technical Report which may or may not be aligned with the RAC opinion. HSE then publish their opinion on the substance within 12 months. From then, they have 12 months to recommend a revised classification to ministers. After the minister approves the change, it will be amended on the CLP Mandatory Classification Table and will include an entry into force date. This date will be set to allow industry time to respond and, although expected to be 18 months, it is not set in stone.

Advocacy, Regulatory and Communications (ARC) Committee

During the year, it was announced that HSE would look at regulatory reform of the GB CLP Regulation. UKCPI secretariat met with HSE officials and subsequently arranged an online meeting for members to hear of the proposals first hand. Consultation on the proposals is expected in early 2025.

Review of the Detergents Regulations

In Europe, the Commission continues to review the Detergents Regulations and AISE continues to advocate on behalf of industry and responded to developments during the course of the year. In February the EU Parliament voted on its position and in June the Council adopted its general approach. It is expected that trilogue discussion will start in November. If this is the case, it would mean a potential end of trilogues at the start of 2025, with an "Entry into Force" later in 2025.
In the UK there have been no changes to the regulations, so for the moment we remain aligned, but this will change when changes are adopted at the EU level. UKCPI used its newly-formed Primary Authority Partnership to obtain assured advice that additional fragrance allergens could be included on the label.

Biocidal products

Following the end of the EU exit transition period on 31 December 2020, the EU Article 95 list of biocidal active substance suppliers is no longer applicable in Great Britain (England, Wales and Scotland). Under the GB Biocidal Products Regulation (GB BPR) Great Britain maintains its own, independent list of biocidal active substance suppliers, referred to as the GB Article 95 list. Biocidal active substance and product suppliers included on the EU Article 95 List on 31 December 2020 were automatically added to the GB Article 95 List.

To remain on the GB Article 95 List, suppliers had to submit information to HSE by 31 December 2022. Suppliers that failed to submit the relevant information to HSE by 31 December 2022 will be removed from the GB Article 95 List.

UKCPI is in regular contact with HSE Chemicals Regulations Directorate. Priority is given to new active substance and biocidal product applications so they can get to market. HSE announced that it would look to reform the GB BPR. UKCPI secretariat met with HSE officials and subsequently arranged an online meeting with for Members to hear of the proposals first hand. Consultation on the proposals is expected in early 2025.

Other legislative areas / horizon monitoring

The UKCPI Advocacy, Regulatory & Communications Committee actively monitors other legislative areas, such as cosmetics, aerosols and perfumes, for issues that could influence our product categories.

To keep up to date on issues relevant to our industry, UKCPI regularly liaises with the Defra Chemicals Policy & Communication Forum, DfT UN transport briefings, HSE GHS Stakeholders Group and the Environment Agency Chemical Industry Liaison Group throughout the year.

UKCPI Technical Manager Steven Stewart is in regular contact with technical managers in other industry trade associations. Furthermore, our Director General, Philip Malpass, sits on the Alliance of Chemical Associations (ACA), which represents the majority of the UK chemicals industries, as well as the Chemicals Stakeholder Forum run by Defra.

Communications

Take Action Today, Put Them Away campaign

The Take Action Today, Put Them Away home safety campaign, which UKCPI runs in partnership with the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents (RoSPA), continued to work to reduce the number of children involved in incidents of accidental exposure to cleaning products in the home.

UKCPI and RoSPA rolled out the 2024 programme together with partners from local councils and public health teams, who offered excellent feedback on the campaign. In 2024, the campaign targeted areas including Blackpool, North and West Northamptonshire, Coventry, Somerset, Leicester and Lincolnshire.
There was a fantastic response from parents, with 97% saying that the magnetic fridge pad is helpful in reminding them to put their chemicals in a safer place and 96% saying that the checklist is useful or very useful in helping to make their homes safer.

This year we have been developing new campaign materials which will include a wipe-clean fridge magnet with key messages about the safe use and safe storage of cleaning products. The wipe-clean reusable format is more sustainable than the previous paper version and will keep the safety messages in the homes of families for longer.

UKCPI has now funded launches in over 50 areas of the UK, reaching over 700,000 families who have been helped to avoid accidental exposures.

Going forward, we are looking into expanding the campaign concept to address another area of home safety to include dementia sufferers and their carers. The aim of this would be to ensure that vulnerable people at the older end of the age spectrum would receive the campaign's messages about the safe use and safe storage of cleaning products.

Recycling awareness

UKCPI supported WRAP's annual Recycle Week in October on social media, to raise awareness of the importance of recycling cleaning product packaging. This year the national campaign focused on "missed capture": the items that can be recycled but are commonly missed in the home, including cleaning product packaging. Organisers Recycle Now applauded our emphasis on reading the label to follow recycling instructions.

Advocacy, Regulatory and Communications (ARC) Committee

Media relations

Liquid Laundry Detergent Capsules

In August 2024 UKCPI was contacted by the Daily Mail with a request for comment on the coroner's report related to the tragic death of a dementia sufferer. We sent a holding statement which we also made available for members to use.

The Daily Mail article included quotes from UKCPI as well as the government and sheltered housing firm in their article.

> Philip Malpass, Director General at the UK Cleaning Products Industry Association, said: "Like any other household cleaning products, laundry capsules need to be stored in a secure place where vulnerable individuals cannot easily access them"

Air Fresheners

The producer of BBC radio 4's Sliced Bread programme contacted us in April regarding a programme they were making on air fresheners. Working with members, we sent a detailed response and the programme included statements from UKCPI. The programme also heard from Nicola Carslaw, professor in indoor air chemistry at the University of York, and Krishna Persaud, emeritus professor of chemo-reception at the University of Manchester.

> "The UK Cleaning Products Industry Association, which represents air freshener producers, told us that VOCs are part of everyday life, they are what make things smell"
> "UKCPI told us that as well as the official safety standards there's also a voluntary scheme that means air products carry certain warnings"

Overall, the programme was balanced and we are pleased that the main points from the industry were represented in the programme.

Member communications

Throughout the year, UKCPI kept members appraised of the latest news, events and regulatory updates via the monthly members' newsletter, email alerts and the members' area of the website.

Advocacy, Regulatory and Communications (ARC) Committee

Event partnerships

UKCPI supported events including Cleaning Products Europe in Prague and the Future of Homecare Cleaning Products Europe in London, with partnerships which raised its profile and secured discounts to the events for UKCPI members.

Communications network

UKCPI's communications officer, Charlotte Salter, participates in AISE's Commsnet network of communications professionals across Europe as well as AISE's Public Affairs and Communications Steering Group. We also work with communication colleagues in the American Cleaning Institute (ACI) and the International Association of Cleaning Products Associations (INCPA). Participation in these networks enables a useful exchange of information and best practice knowledge, as well as training in new communications tools.

Social media

UKCPI published key messages to audiences on both X and Linked In throughout the year, a snapshot of which is illustrated below.

External contacts and stakeholders

In addition to a specific external affairs programme to meet and brief a number of key groups and opinion formers throughout 2024, UKCPI worked closely with government departments, other trade associations, NGOs, external stakeholders and the media on matters of common interest. These have included:

- All Party Parliamentary Group (APPG) for the Cleaning and Hygiene sector
- Allergy UK
- Alliance of Chemical Associations (ACA)
- Alzheimer's Society
- American Cleaning Institute (ACI)
- Association for Soaps, Detergents and Maintenance Products (AISE)
- Asthma UK
- Australian Hygiene, personal care & specialty products industry (ACCORD)
- British Aerosols Manufacturers Association (BAMA)
- British Chemical Association (BCA)
- British Brands Group
- British Cleaning Council (BCC)
- British Coatings Federation (BCF)
- British Plastics Federation (BPF)
- British Retail Consortium (BRC)
- British Standards Institute (BSI)
- Canadian Consumer Specialty Products Association (CCSPA)
- Chemical Business Association (CBA)
- Cleaning Products Europe
- UK Chemicals Stakeholders Forum (CSF)
- Child Accident Prevention Trust (CAPT)
- Cleaning Industry Liaison Forum (CILF)
- Cosmetics, Toiletry and Perfumery Association (CTPA)
- DEFRA's Chemicals Policy & Communication Forum
- Dementia UK
- Department for Business and Trade (DBT)
- Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA)

- UN Sub Committee of Experts on GHS (UNSCoEGHS)
- Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP)

All-Party Parliamentary Group (APPG) for the cleaning and hygiene sector

All APPGs were dissolved prior to the July general election. UKCPI is currently seeking to reform this sector-specific group to facilitate an exchange of information between members of both houses and our sector.

All these organisations contributed to the influence and effectiveness of UKCPI during 2024.

UKCPI team

The UKCPI team is supported by teams of experts drawn from our membership in the fields of technical, regulatory and external affairs. The overall leadership of the UKCPI is provided by the Council made up of industry leaders.

Philip Malpass, Director General

Graduated in marine sciences with a Masters and post graduate research in marine environmental chemistry. Philip has experience of working in communications and external affairs for multinational chemicals and pharmaceutical companies, as well as managing issues and external relations for international alcohol brands.
philip.malpass@ukcpi.org

Steven Stewart, Technical Manager

Steve is responsible for technical and regulatory affairs at UKCPI. He graduated with honours in chemistry and has over 30 years' experience in the cleaning products sector.
sstewart@ukcpi.org

Charlotte Salter, Communications Officer

Charlotte covers digital media, press office, external and internal communications for UKCPI. She holds a degree in French, Spanish and Italian and has experience in digital and print publishing, having previously worked as a magazine editor for international B2B magazines and websites.
charlotte.salter@ukcpi.org

Kathryn Dodgson, Admin Manager

Kathryn is responsible for the smooth running of UKCPI administration, as well as UKCPI committees and events. She previously worked for the NHS for over eight years in various roles, including management of NHS pharmaceutical contracts and GP contracts. Kathryn has a degree in English Literature.
